APPRAISING THE PRIMARY

The proper way, in our opinion, to appraise the results of last week's Democratic Primary Election, is that a majority of Virginia citizens desire a Conservative government.

It was a great victory for the "organization." But it was more than that. And it more than a victory for the individual candidates involved.

It was, in our opinion, another demonstration that Virginians are inclined to favor reasonable progress, but at a conservative level, and although willing to hear each and every instructive viewpoint, and proposal, somehow just feel safest when the state is governed by leaders who are most likely to be trusted for no extreme changes in our way of life.

We have nothing but praise for those who lost in last week's primary. They were extremely able men, and Virginia will gladly welcome their public services in years to come. They should have no regrets in the election results.

However, it narrows down to the fine point, that the thinking in our great state, is to keep Virginia along its present moderate course, seeking every opportunity for advancement, yet dedicated to our tried and proven traditions.

We congratulate the winners in the primary, and hope that a militant Virginia will continue to be the Ark of the Covenant of our National Heritage, and the bright est of "all them stars!"

A GREAT HERO PASSES

There are many among us who "worshipped" the great heroes in the sports world. You would have a difficult time convincing us that Jack Dempsey was not the all-time tops in heavyweight boxing— that Bobby Jones was not the greatest golfer . . . that Bill Tilden was not the greatest in tennis, etc.

And it overlaps into entertainment. Al Jolson, Eddie Cantor, and Sophie Tucker, John Barrymore, as long a list as you care to go!

But when it came to baseball, we had our precious heroes. Oh, there were so many, Walter Johnson, and Christy Mathewson, and old Grover Cleveland Alexander, if you didn't want to go back to Eddie Plank and names we "youngsters" heard our fathers mention as heroes.

Your writer once talked with the immortal Babe Ruth. Some say he was the greatest baseball player of them all. Could be. I saw him swat them over the fence for his fabulous home runs.

But, if it came to a show-down, we would have to say that the "Georgia Peach" was the tops!

Tyrus Raymond Cobb, 74, passed away this week, Bon voyage, Tye! He was the greatest baseball player of them all! Only once in the writer's life did we see him play; ah yes, you can bet he "stole second base" and scored when he had the other players retreating to the safety of the outfield! Baseball never had but one Tye Cobb! And, he has passed on, at 74. Bless the memory of this great competitor.

Rural Electrification means more jobs, better jobs, For All People!

It took plenty of everything—from paint to parts to people—to make and deliver over a billion dollars worth of commodities bought last year by the 17,900 consumer-owners of Southside Electric Cooperative.

This great new market, for all commodities required, means more jobs, and better jobs in towns and cities across our broad land. It's a market that did not exist until people like members of the Southside Electric Cooperative banded together in 1937 to serve themselves with electric lights and power.

We are happy and proud that our efforts to serve the unserved in rural Southside Virginia—together with those of other electric cooperatives—have brought this new stimulation to the economy of the entire nation.
